MEDO PARLEY SCHEDULED FOR MALTA MONDAY

THE Americans intend to bring their case before the U.N. on the question of Tunisia and Morocco. The French won't like it, especially after M. Pinay's forthright and downright statements that Tunisia and Morocco were none of U.N.'s business. But the fact seems to be that M. Pinay's forthrightness was chiefly a shrewd fitching of his home critics' thunder. There had been a determined move to bring foreign affairs into debate in the French Assembly with the object of manoeuvring M. Schuman into difficulties and in the hope of getting rid of him. But the Premier has managed to evade the ambush carefully prepared for him and his Foreign Minister, and to hold off the debate until after the U.N. General Assembly has dispersed. He is not expected to repeat, in anything like the same terms, his objections to a discussion by the General Assembly of the problems of Tunisia and Morocco.

FOR that matter, it is likely that the Quai d'Orsay and the State Department have talked the matter over amicably and have come to some kind of agreement. France may now submit to a general discussion addressed to the Arab-Asian resolution but, in that case, should be able to rely upon effective support for her argument that the question of whether Tunisia and Morocco are problems exclusively of domestic concern, should be decided by the World Court. Any shifting of the issue from New York to The Hague would catch the Arab-Asian plan to have the two problems put to a U.N. enquiry mission, which, it is believed, would almost certainly return findings in support of the main Tunisian and Moroccan claims.

THE Americans probably feel that on this occasion they owe it to France to show a little more understanding of French susceptibilities than they have shown of late. Although there has been an attempt in Washington and London to represent the Franco-American rift which followed the U.S. Ambassador's delivery of a "Note" on foreign aid and the French defense effort to the French Government, on Monday of last week, as a storm in a fine glass, the occasion has been lost alive by an indignant French press. It has greatly embarrassed the U.S. Government, which was guilty of circumstances and tactlessness. If not, as charged by the Paris newspapers, of contempt for the sovereignty and world status of France. It is said in some quarters that M. Pinay's attitude to the so-called Note — which appears to have been left rather than a formal Note — and his decision to hand it back, was to a certain extent, as in the case of the Tunisia and Morocco questions, another move to keep his own critics at bay and show that he and M. Schuman were as diligent in the service of French prestige as anyone.

ON the whole, Franco-American relations seem quite friendly again and there should now be a tendency in Washington to help M. Pinay instead of to hinder him. Family troubles are natural enough, but now is not the time to emphasize them or give them dramatic airings. The Paris-Washington squabbles, like the irritation caused in London by Britain's exclusion from the ANZUS discussions on Pacific defense, have come at the very moment when the Moscow Congress has been marking the most of just such disputes. How deep do these differences of opinion run? That is a question to be answered with authority only by the Government concerned. But it seems fairly obvious that whether deep or shallow, their impact is widespread, and is causing a great deal of anti-American feeling among the West European peoples. The British and the French are still proud powers; and they are even more so since those years when the Big Four states of Britain and France were unquestioned. Foreigners are apt to forget this; and to forget that the public goodwill of their Allies is hardly less important than their military forces.

Stalin: We Need Outside Support

MOSCOW. Wednesday (Reuters). — Marshal Stalin told the Communist Party congress here last night that the Soviet Union needs the support of people's regimes and the Soviet Communist Party to help foreign communists and democratic parties fight for peace and liberation.

The 72-year-old Soviet Prime Minister and Communist Party leader was greeted with prolonged cheering when he made his first speech in four and a half years to the 19th Party congress. He was replying to messages of greetings brought by foreign Communist Party leaders to the congress.

"Careful attention must be paid to the situation of these workers and peasants who are still suffering under the heel of cruel bourgeois law,"

Marshal Stalin said. The task of these parties was difficult but they would be victorious, he said. The ruling classes of most capitalist countries had abandoned the liberalism which had once made them popular with their peoples.

They had discarded the championship of the rights of nations and of the individual, and there was no one left to take it over but the communist and democratic parties.

Stalin refuted as "wrong" the view, which he said was held by some that the Soviet Union no longer needed the support of sympathizers outside Russia. "Our Party and country always need and will continue to need the confidence, sympathy, and support of brotherly people abroad," he declared.

This support, Stalin said, was above all the support which the peace-loving people gave to their own country and their own people in the struggle for the preservation of peace.

"When in 1918/19 during the armed attack of the bourgeoisie on the Soviet Union, the British workers organized the struggle agains the British garrison in the name. The masses will not give up the memory of our struggle for freedom," he said.

Comrade Stalin is unanimous on whether the Malta Conference will be the final summit of the U.S. and Britain over an Allied Command for South Europe, which Britain said, however, that if the problem is not solved, it would at least be caused.

The move reflects the growing concern in NATO about the weakness of the Middle Eastern area, where any sudden threat to the oil fields of Iraq would be met with virtually no resistance.

Thus, while many say that though it had been hoped to negotiate an Allied Command for Britain, it would do so in connection with the reorganization of the British garrison in the name. The masses will not give up the memory of our struggle for freedom," he said.

When Comrade Thoros or Comrade Toplitski declare that these people will not fight against the Soviet Union we recognize to such statements in the first place the support of the workers and peasants of the Assembly same immediately after the election of the Committee Chairman. Earlier, the delegates had approved without voting a proposal that the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Political Committee be given a seat in the Assembly's Steering Committee which recommends the adoption and distribution of items on the agenda, thus increasing the Committee membership to 35 instead of the normal 24.

Mr. Gronya (USSR) criticized the President for having tolerated a "grave departure from the generally accepted practice of the Assembly." The President of the Assembly, Mr. Lester Pearson (Canada), responded that the Soviet delegate was himself completely out of order in discussing a decision already taken by the assembly.

The other members of the Committee are: V. M. Molotov (Russia), L. Kaganovich, P. N. Postupov (Director of the Marx-Engels-Lenin Institute); A. N. Gromyko (Czechoslovakia); Economic: A. M. Ali (Pakistan); Scientific: N. N. Kurnakov (Russia); Cultural: C. A. Arribalzaga (Philippines); Budgetary: Prince Wan Wai Yip (Thailand).

The first four were all approved without opposition. In the case of the Legal Committee, there was a long debate. Professor Stefan Losko of Poland was proposed by Yugoslavia in opposition to Prince Ali, and supported by Mr. T. L. Rosenberg. They refused to comment on the meeting and returned immediately to Tel Aviv.

Architecture Show Opens at Technion

HAIFA, Wednesday.—Inspiring new ideas in Israeli architecture is the purpose of the new exhibition of student work opened today at the Technion. Designs and plans by Technion students in all four terms, and six entries from promising students in each of eight other countries, make up the display.

The exhibition is intended to acquaint local students with new ideas from abroad in their fields. It will become an annual event in all nine countries, and those that join in the future. It is felt that Israel can benefit particularly from architectural development in Greece and South America, whose climate is similar to her own.

Part of the Technion students' work on display was chosen at an International Contest at L'Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. Candidates were asked to plan a model school for a small town. Other local students' works reflected Israeli's climate and sociological conditions, and endeavored to avoid past and present mistakes in the layout, design and construction of private and public housing and industrial and community buildings. An Italian architectural journal has decided to publish some of the work of the Technion students.

The exhibition is under the direction of Prof. Yochanan Reiner, Deputy Vice-President of the Technion and head of the Architecture Department.

Taxi Drivers Due To Strike this Morning

TEL AVIV, Wednesday. — Local and inter-urban taxi drivers here are due to strike from 6:30 a.m. to noon tomorrow to protest against what they call "wholesale distribution of licences to unqualified persons."

The protest is also directed against the proposed formation of a company to import 100 taxis and rent them to drivers.

A spokesman of the Taxi Drivers Association told The Post that the Ministry of Communications has been distributing licences indiscriminately in telephone, bank clerks, and even to police personnel, who run the taxis through hired hands. The Association claims licences should have been reserved mainly for bona-fide drivers.

Tel Aviv taxi drivers will also strike between 10 a.m. and noon.

The Association is stopping work both as a sign of solidarity with the Tel Aviv strikers and in protest against the "unjust" distribution of green numbers for non-professional drivers.

Keinan and Ben Yair Verdict Appealed

The findings of fact by the Court in the acquittal of Amos Keinan and Shai'el Ben Yair in the bombing of the home of the late Minister of Communications were not supported by evidence, the State charged in an appeal filed in the Tel Aviv District Court yesterday.

The appeal claims that there is a vital discrepancy between the typewritten record of the proceedings and the handwritten copy made by the Attorney-General charged.

The appeal also questioned the Judge's legal decisions and stated that the accused's silence to the Police about the telephone call, which they later described in Court, should have aroused suspicion, despite the Judge's ruling that he could draw no legal conclusion from this fact.
